

NorthStar Technologies Inc.

Anti-Harassment and Equal Employment Opportunity Policy

This policy applies to all employees of NorthStar Technologies Inc. The purpose of this document is to establish clear expectations, responsibilities, approval procedures, and compliance requirements. Employees are expected to review this policy during onboarding and follow it throughout their employment.

Managers are responsible for consistent application of this policy. Human Resources may update the policy periodically. Violations may result in coaching, corrective action, or disciplinary measures depending on severity.

Key principles include fairness, transparency, legal compliance, confidentiality, respectful workplace behavior, documentation of approvals, and accountability. Questions should be directed to Human Resources before taking action that could conflict with company policy.

Examples and scenarios: employees should notify supervisors promptly, maintain accurate records, protect confidential information, complete required training, and cooperate with audits. Exceptions require written approval from HR or executive management. This policy applies to all employees of NorthStar Technologies Inc. The purpose of this document is to establish clear expectations, responsibilities, approval procedures, and compliance requirements. Employees are expected to review this policy during onboarding and follow it throughout their employment.

Managers are responsible for consistent application of this policy. Human Resources may update the policy periodically. Violations may result in coaching, corrective action, or disciplinary measures depending on severity.

Key principles include fairness, transparency, legal compliance, confidentiality, respectful workplace behavior, documentation of approvals, and accountability. Questions should be directed to Human Resources before taking action that could conflict with company policy.

Examples and scenarios: employees should notify supervisors promptly, maintain accurate records, protect confidential information, complete required training, and cooperate with audits. Exceptions require written approval from HR or executive management. This policy applies to all employees of NorthStar Technologies Inc. The purpose of this document is to establish clear expectations, responsibilities, approval procedures, and compliance requirements. Employees are expected to review this policy during onboarding and follow it throughout their employment.

Managers are responsible for consistent application of this policy. Human Resources may update the policy periodically. Violations may result in coaching, corrective action, or disciplinary measures depending on severity.

Key principles include fairness, transparency, legal compliance, confidentiality, respectful workplace behavior, documentation of approvals, and accountability. Questions should be directed to Human Resources before taking action that could conflict with company policy.

Examples and scenarios: employees should notify supervisors promptly, maintain accurate records, protect confidential information, complete required training, and cooperate with audits. Exceptions require written approval from HR or executive management. This policy applies to all employees of NorthStar Technologies Inc. The purpose of this document is to establish clear expectations, responsibilities, approval procedures, and compliance requirements. Employees are expected to review this policy during onboarding and follow it throughout their employment.

Managers are responsible for consistent application of this policy. Human Resources may update the policy periodically. Violations may result in coaching, corrective action, or disciplinary measures depending on severity.

Key principles include fairness, transparency, legal compliance, confidentiality, respectful workplace behavior, documentation of approvals, and accountability. Questions should be directed to Human Resources before taking action that could conflict with company policy.

Examples and scenarios: employees should notify supervisors promptly, maintain accurate records, protect confidential information, complete required training, and cooperate with audits. Exceptions require written approval from HR or executive management. This policy applies to all employees of NorthStar Technologies Inc. The purpose of this document is to establish clear expectations, responsibilities, approval procedures, and compliance requirements. Employees are expected to review this policy during onboarding and follow it throughout their employment.

Managers are responsible for consistent application of this policy. Human Resources may update the policy periodically. Violations may result in coaching, corrective action, or disciplinary measures depending on severity.

Key principles include fairness, transparency, legal compliance, confidentiality, respectful workplace behavior, documentation of approvals, and accountability. Questions should be directed to Human Resources before taking action that could conflict with company policy.

Examples and scenarios: employees should notify supervisors promptly, maintain accurate records, protect confidential information, complete required training, and cooperate with audits. Exceptions require written approval from HR or executive management. This policy applies to all employees of NorthStar Technologies Inc. The purpose of this document is to establish clear expectations, responsibilities, approval procedures, and compliance requirements. Employees are expected to review this policy during onboarding and follow it throughout their employment.

Managers are responsible for consistent application of this policy. Human Resources may update the policy periodically. Violations may result in coaching, corrective action, or disciplinary measures depending on severity.

Key principles include fairness, transparency, legal compliance, confidentiality, respectful workplace behavior, documentation of approvals, and accountability. Questions should be directed to Human Resources before taking action that could conflict with company policy.

Examples and scenarios: employees should notify supervisors promptly, maintain accurate records, protect confidential information, complete required training, and cooperate with audits. Exceptions require written approval from HR or executive management. This policy applies to all employees of NorthStar Technologies Inc. The purpose of this document is to establish clear expectations, responsibilities, approval procedures, and compliance requirements. Employees are expected to review this policy during onboarding and follow it throughout their employment.

Managers are responsible for consistent application of this policy. Human Resources may update the policy periodically. Violations may result in coaching, corrective action, or disciplinary measures depending on severity.

Key principles include fairness, transparency, legal compliance, confidentiality, respectful workplace behavior, documentation of approvals, and accountability. Questions should be directed to Human Resources before taking action that could conflict with company policy.

Examples and scenarios: employees should notify supervisors promptly, maintain accurate records, protect confidential information, complete required training, and cooperate with audits. Exceptions require written approval from HR or executive management. This policy applies to all employees of NorthStar Technologies Inc. The purpose of this document is to establish clear expectations, responsibilities, approval procedures, and compliance requirements. Employees are expected to review this policy during onboarding and follow it throughout their employment.

Managers are responsible for consistent application of this policy. Human Resources may update the policy periodically. Violations may result in coaching, corrective action, or disciplinary measures depending on severity.

Key principles include fairness, transparency, legal compliance, confidentiality, respectful workplace behavior, documentation of approvals, and accountability. Questions should be directed to Human Resources before taking action that could conflict with company policy.

Examples and scenarios: employees should notify supervisors promptly, maintain accurate records, protect confidential information, complete required training, and cooperate with audits. Exceptions require written approval from HR or executive management.